COVA seeking muscle

The fate of COVA — the Congress of Valley Agencies — may be decided shortly after 6:45 p.m. Monday when Livermore Councilperson Helen Tirsell completes her comments to the Pleasanton city council.

As the chairperson for COVA, Tirsell has been struggling to broaden that valley panel's powers — to include such items as the Stoneridge Regional Center which Pleasanton has been trying to develop in its northwest sector for the past seven years, and now sees as a reality no later than 1977.

Any further review by an unofficial panel such as COVA could delay, and perhaps even jeopardize that coveted retail hub, most Pleasanton council members believe. They want no further delays or threats to that retail plumb at this late hour.

Tirsell reasons that "a center of this magnitude will have widespread impact on the total valley," and therefore should be reviewed by COVA, which includes Livermore city council, Zone 7 and the VCSD board of directors on its membership.

Tirsell will make her pitch to the council starting at 6:45 p.m. Monday. She has been offered just 15 minutes for those remarks. The council is expected to take even less time in deciding that Pleasanton will reject any COVA overview of a retail hub that is supposed to generate up to $1 million in new tax revenues to the local budget annually.

"This could mean the end of COVA," defenders of that valley-wide planning agency have said.

Randy Barker, Scott Taylor, Laurie Williams, Mary Moran and David Lyons of the Murray School District, gather around t.v. sets discussing the possibility of perhaps one day being on a television program. "By a flick of the switch," says David, "we could be seen in real live black and white."

Murray schools viewing student television plans

Watching a television show has led Mrs. Joann Cozart of the Murray School District to working on a new innovation for the schools in this area. She would like to see the children have the same opportunity as those in Walnut Creek and Moraga.

The students in those locations, for the past school year, have been appearing on Channel 6 T.V. with a weekly program of "Newsrnom 6." The entire 15 minute program is perfomed by the students and involves world, national, local and school news.

As a weekly feature, students interview a celebrity.The young possible future broadcasters devise their own questions and often interview the celebrity "on location" using the cable television stations "Port-a-pack" camera. Such celebrities as Rick Barry, Jim Otto, Ray Guy, Warren Bankston and others have been questioned by the interviewers.

The program is taped in advance and then run at a later date which gives the performers an opportunity to see themselves on T.V. Students not performing the duties of broadcasting, but acting as part of the audience also get an opportunity to be "on camera" as the taping includes getting shots of all students in attendance.

Mrs. Betty M. Frandsen of Walnut Creek was the instigator in making the program become a reality for the Walnut Creek students. According to Mrs. Frandsen, the students have gained, "awareness of current events, interest in news, education in the reporting and dissemination of news, education in the importance of language skills, exposure to all the different careers existing in the news and performing fields, and poise.

Industrial and business cooperation in the ventures and support of local school superintendents are making the programs available despite the fact school districts may otherwise be hampered by financial problems.

The success of the program has been written up in many newspapers, including the May 15, 1975 issue of the New York Times. A national educator's magazine, "My Weekly Reader," is planning a feature story around the weekly happening.

Joann in working with Mrs. Frandsen, has received the approval of the Murray School District superintendent, Dr. Donald Williams, the station's go ahead, but she is now looking for sponsors to make the program become a "real thing."

Dow Chemical helped sponsor the telecast in conjunction with another sponsor, but because of the great success of the program, have now agreed to be soul supporter for the weekly performance.

Anyone desiring further information or interested in sponsoring Joann's endeavor, may contact her at 462-2251.

Sunol Glen okays budget

SUNOL— The Sunol Glen School board of trustees has approved a $306,934 tentative budget for 1975-76.

The figure, for expenditures, is up almost $27,000 from the 1974-75 budget.

Budget income figure is $307,780, not counting the undistributed reserve amount brought forward from 1974-75.The final budget income figure for the past school year was $313,269.

A classifed employes proposal calling for an average 8 per cent increase was approved by the board. The school has three full-time classified employes.

$329 million budget

Taxpayers face 13 cent Alameda tax increase

Alameda County Bureau

Alameda County taxpayers can expect to be paying about 13 per cent more on their county property tax this year.

That was the final result of four days of testimony and discussion on the massive $329 million Alameda County budget.

Although the supervisors managed to hold the Line on County Administrator Loren Enoch's austere budget, an estimated 8.9 per cent jump in assessed valuation coupled with a 13 cent jump in the tax rate will boost taxes for local homeowners some 13 per cent.

However, valley homeowners can expect a slightly larger jump than homeowners over the hills. Traditionally, similar homes are assessed 8 per cent higher in the valley and consequently valley taxpayers will absorb a larger increase. (Eight per cent of $40,000 is considerably more than 8 per cent of $30,000, so the overall jump in value is higher).

The supervisors reached agreement late Thursday evening when Supervisor Fred Cooper finally arrived from a trial in Martinez. Cooper had only appeared at one of three previous hearings and forced the delay in Thursday's final decision.

The final budget actually amounted to $329,257,186, or $4,759 less than the proposed budget, but only by drastic cuts in several areas.

Welfare and alcohol and drug abuse programs took the biggest cuts, and the supervisors also ruled that 374 new, needed positions would have to remain unfilled.

The operating reserve will amount to only $5 million, down $2 million from last year's total. A county spokesman indicated that the difference is largely due to the unexpectedly high wage settlements that had to be funded from the reserve.

Locally, however, some programs did manage to receive funding.

The Shared Recruitment Program, which allows Livermore and Pleasanton to recruit and test prospective employes through a central county program, did get six month funding, which will be followed by an evaluation.

The Amador-Livermore Historical Society succeeded in maintaining its $10,000 stipend from the county despite sending in its application late.

The Dublin Chamber of Commerce avoided a 10 per cent cut in county funds, due primarily to the efforts of Supervisor Joseph Bort, but the Livermore Heritage Guild did not receive the $1,000 it requested from the county.

The supervisors also eliminated a proposed planning department addition that would have allocated one person to work on plans for Harlann Geldermann's New Town north of Livermore.

The planners felt that since they were bound to check on Geldermann's specific plan for the development, they would need a fulltime assistant. However, all four supervisors present at that vote (Cooper was absent) did not agree.

Pleasanton to scan big fair expansion

PLEASANTON — The city council on Monday will take a ciose look at a $4 million expansion plan for the Alameda County Fair, but not before the muni board first resolves an expensive "mistake" at the brand new Cultural Arts Building.

Failure to provide a patio cover at the Black Avenue building would have left a gas kiln in the outdoors, and city staff now concludes that such a kiln is both essential to cultural arts activities, and cannot very well be operated without a cover of some kind.

The building that has already topped the $100,000 mark, will now need a few thousand more for this latest addition. Staff suggests that $5000 can be drained off the 1974-75 budget, an additional $900 to come from the 1975-76 budget with "donations from interested citizens and organizations" filling out that project. The Pleasanton Art League is a major contributor on that score.

In the matter of adding to the County Fair's attractions, the fair board submitted its plans to the Pleasanton Planning Commission earlier, and now the big package comes before the council for its review. The five-year plan plan starts this year with relocation of the carnival midway and kiddie area further west on Bernal ($325,000) and would add new livestock barns ($485,000) as a second priority item.

Landscaping, lighting of public walkways and clean-up of the grounds will require over $500,000 through 1978. Next major addition will be a new Hall of Commerce Building to be added in 1979 at a cost of $1 million.

Preschool in Dublin wins grace

Alameda County Bureau

The Dublin Preschool at 7890 Oxbow Lane in Dublin received a five-year variance to continue operation in a residential area at Wednesday's Zoning Administrator hearing in Hayward.

Mrs. Jeannette Northcutt has run the school for the past two years and Zoning Administrator Dick Flynn approved her request for a five year variance.

Operating Engineers' Local Union No. 3 Credit Union also received approval from Flynn to set up an administrative office near the intersection of Dublin Boulevard and Village Parkway. The office will be set up in an area zoned light industrial but the absence of much foot traffic led to Flynn's action.

Chabot trustees approve $14 million-plus budget

A tentative budget of $14,149,769 for the 1975-76 school year has been approved by South County Community College District Trustees for the maintenance and operation of the Livermore and Hayward Campuses.

A tax increase of 1.64 cents would be required to finance the budget. This represents a 1.21 cent reduction from the projected tax rate which accompanied the preliminary budget submitted to trustees a few weeks ago.

The current tax rate is 67.2 cents per $100 of assessed valuation. Under the tentative budget, the rate would be 68.84 cents.

Expenditures for the new fiscal year are based on a project enrollment of 19,000 students. Besides its campuses in Livermore and Hayward, temporary classrooms operate at public schools in Livermore, Pleasanton, Dublin, Hayward, and San Leandro.

The tentative budget still contains many estimates regarding both revenues and expenditures. Assessed valuation of secured and unsecured property required for computation of final 1975-76 tax rates will not be available until July 10.

The tentative budget anticipates an estimated increase of nine per cent in the secured roll and two per cent in the utility roll.

Portola School chorus ends long successful career

LIVERMORE — Sixty young voices chorused the ancient Hebrew song, "Shalom Havarin," in three-part harmony.

"Peace be with you til we meet again," sang the children, standing in proud rows in their blue and white uniforms.

Thus the Portola School Chorus, Livermore's unique elementary singing group, fittingly ended a dazzling career that spanned more than 10 years and brought top honors to the school.

Spring Concert on May 29 was the chorus's last show. It was hard on the small musicians, aged 9 to 12, to get through the concert knowing it would be their last time on the wooden risers in front of proud parents and admiring friends.

They knew they were good. In the past seven years, the chorus had taken six "unanimous superior" ratings at state music festivals. That's the best you can get, every judge ranking you right at the top.

The other year, they had received a "superior," also a distinction to be proud of.

Many of the children were on TV one Christmas ago, when the Portola Chorus was singled out to represent Bay Area elementary musical groups in a Channel 7 special production. Not only was it hard on the kids to put an end to the chorus's proud history. It was especially hard on George Kerr, the stern but loving fifth-grade teacher who came to school 45 minutes early, four or five days a week, to rehearse his students in sections. The main rehearsal for the whole chorus was on Wednesdays during school time. The other rehearsals were on the kids' time, at an hour when their brothers and sisters and playmates were just rolling out of bed.

Kerr has been leading the chorus for the past 10 years, having taken it over from a salaried music teacher in the days when the Livermore Unified School District still paid for music and art teachers for the elementary grades.

During the 1969 financial collapse, the district cut its elementary programsto the bone, but the Portola School Chorus continued without missing a beat because it wasn't costing the district any money to speak of.

Kerr's gentle Oklahoma accent belies his uncompromising musicianship. He believes in teaching children to read music, exposing them to classical forms, expecting their diction and rhythm and pitch to be no less than professional.

He majored in music in college and his wife, Mayola, a Jackson Elementary School teacher, shares with him his love of song.

The final Portola Chorus program included a little of everything:"Eye Hath Not Seen, Ear Hath Not Heard," by Frederick Gaul, from the oratorio, "The Holy City;" "It's a Grand Night for Singing;" "Which Way America?" a patriotic song; "The Computer," a contemporary novelty number; "Little Bird, Little Bird" from the musical, Man of La Mancha; and several other selections.

It's Kerr's musicianship that has proved to be one of the forces leading to the undoing of the Portola School Chorus.

"In a choral activity, you just can't have 60 individualists," he sadly explains.

"The kids don't have self-discipline. They don't know how to work, and you have to work hard to produce a good performance."

"Parents complain about schools not having any discipline, but they won't allow them to administer any firmer discipline."

He feels children today are not brought up to be pluggers and workers, and that the modern "loosey-goosey" attitude has undermined his work.

He also finds the school's "Activity Day" programs lure kids away from chorus. "What kid wouldn't rather go bowling than work his butt off for me?"

Problem number three is money.

It takes $350 to $400 a year to pay for the chorus's music, even though Kerr cuts corners by making his own arrangements of some songs and dittoing them off himself. Another expense is the cost of getting to San Jose or Fremont or Oakland or wherever the annual state music festival is to be held.

The smart pale-blue blazers for the boys, and the girls' blue skirts, are made by parents, says Kerr. And accompanist Pat Mann has been doing her job as a volunteer for many years.

Portola principals in previous years have always "found it in the budget" when Kerr needed some music. But this year, new principal Mary Giorgi has not been able to scrape together the funds, nor has she budgeted the sum out of the school's discretionary funds.

She explains all the extra money went for another teacher so the school would not have to have a combined third and fourth grade class.

At any rate, says the principal, the district should fund their chorus.

"The district ought to recognize that this is an outstanding activity and ought to be funded," she said.

"Music is important in a child's life."

She put in a request to the office of Jack Waggoner, district director of elementary education, but it has not been granted out of the district's $20 million budget (despite the fact that one month's payments to school board members, who receive $40 per meeting, would cover a year's chorus costs with money left over.)

Principal Giorgi has also urged Portola parents to write letters to the district in support of the chorus.

But as far as chorus members and their teacher are concerned, there will be no more singing next year. Lack of moral support and lack of finance at last forced Kerr to make the announcement to his pupils.

"The kids cried," he reports "And I cried.

"But," he reflects, "I am not only unwilling, but incapable of carrying the whole damn load anymore."

Class of 1925 got together again

It was the first class to graduate from "the new school" at Amador High, and the 50th anniversary of that event was enough to attract students from throughout the valley. The gathering was held at Castlewood Country Club, and among the honored guests were two teachers from that era. Ann Brummond Holst (second from left) taught home economics; Dr. W.A. Black (center) taught chemistry and was the varsity basketball coach. They are flanked by Charles J. Fracisco (left), Mrs. Dagmar Fulton Orloff and Cyril Bairos, who helped organize the class reunion. All but five members of that class took part in the gathering.

Valley trustees set meet to talk planning

Board members of the Amador, Murray, Pleasanton and Sunol school districts will hold a joint session Tuesday in Pleasanton to discuss graduation requirements, curriculum articulation at all levels and tutorial programs.

The trustees will convene at 7:30 p.m. in the Amador-Pleasanton District Educational Center, 123 Main St., Pleasanton.

Prior to the joint boards meeting, the Amador Valley Joint High School board is scheduled to meet to act on adoption of the 1975-76 certificated salary schedule. They will also execute a lease agreement for Regional Occupational Program buildings, act to approve plans for categorical aid and adopt the school calendar and hours for 1975-76.

Following the joint boards session, the Pleasanton Elementary School District board will meet.

Agenda items include execution of a contract for re-roofing of Valley View and Pleasanton Elementary schools, action on withdrawing from the County Workmen's Compensation contract and disposal of obsolete equipment.

After the special meeting, trustees will gather in executive session along with board counsel Keith Breon to review progress on the meet and confer process.

Two-car crash

No serious injuries were reported in this 12:30 p.m., Friday, accident on Stoneridge Drive and Pleasant Hill Road. According to police, Sherryn Phillip's new, 1975 MGB roadster was eastbound on Stoneridge when it collided with Ivka Bakarich's 1965 Valiant (background). Phillip careened off the Valiant veering left into a light standard.

County OK's funds to transport aged

Alameda County Bureau

The Cities of Livermore and Pleasanton received funds to set up transportation programs for the elderly after action by the Alameda County Board of Supervisors Tuesday.

Livermore received $22,050 to operate a subsidized taxi service teet the needs of the frail and isolated elderly in the community, while Pleasanton was handed $14,096 to expand the city-run free minibus service now in operation.

The two programs — and two others in South County — were recommended by the Advisory Commission on Aging and were funded by the federal government through revenue sharing and Older American Act funds.

The programs are not expected to go into operation for at least 90 days, according to county spokesmen.

The other two projects that received funds were a subsidized taxi service in San Leandro and a volunteer transportation system using station wagons throughout the Hayward-Union City-San Leandro area.

Community BBQ ducats

Chan Henderson, Pleasanton Chamber of Commerce secretary - manager, and Dr. Barry Winston show three types of tickets that'll be available for those coming to annual Pleasanton community barbecue at Fairgrounds on July 9 and caps Pleasanton Day at Fair. Tickets will be available for sale by June 30.

Summer school starts Monday for Pleasanton youngsters

PLEASANTON — At least 1400 elementary school students begin summer session at three sitds here Monday.

Classes will be held from Monday through Friday, July 25 at Alisal School, Pleasanton Elementary and Harvest Park School. First, second and third grade classes will attend Alisal from 8:45 a.m. to 12:45 p.m. Harvest Park and Pleasanton Elementary classes are in session from 8:15 a.m. to 12:15 p.m.

Summer classes for high school students in the Amador district began Wednesday at Amador Valley High School.

Also commencing Monday is the summer outdoor education program — "Sierras to the Pacific."

Under the direction of Jim Kimbell at Walnut Grove School, the outdoor education program has three separate sections, one entitled "Over the River and Through the Woods" for kindergarten through third graders, "Camping Beneath the Stars" for fourth through seventh graders, and "Mountain High," for youngsters in grades 4-7 interested in back packing.

The primary section will meet daily at Walnut Grove through July 18 and give children an opportunity to explore through day trips many natural and agricultural areas ... such as Tilden Park, Angel Island, Mt. Diablo State Park, Lawrence Hall of Science and the Alexander Lindsay Junior Museum.

"Camping Beneath the Stars," set to meet through July 11, will offer 4-7 grade youngsters trips to Tilden Park, Muir Woods, the Russian River, Mount Tamalpais, Big Sur or Kirby Cove. Their will also be a four-day trip to Snyder's Camp at Carson Pass in El Dorado National Forest.

Back packing experiences for beginners and experienced campers constitutes the third section, which will meet from July 7 to July 24. The first week will begin with classroom orientation and one overnight trip. Campers will be involved in the techniques of selecting, packing and carrying of equipment, use of a compass, plant and animal lore, basic survival techniques and working cooperatively with others in an outdoor setting.

In addition to a second and third grade reading and communications institute, diagnostic learning center and fourth and fifth grade classes in reading, math and writing (all workshops), some of the classes being offered at the elementary level include: Needlecraft, advanced basketball, read and write stories about ghosts, aquariums and terrariums, do your own art thing, golf, teacher assisting, numerical magic, play reading, pottery, rocketry, reading for pleasure, stained glass art, tumbling and gymnastics, band, orchestra, and guitar.

Correction

LIVERMORE — Crestwood Lodge is a retirement apartment complex, not a convalescent home.

The distinction was not made clear in a recent story on the class for pregnant minors, sponsored by the county, which will be held at Crestwood Lodge on Fenton Street. The Times regrets any confusion resulting from the mixup.

Patriotism

LIVERMORE — In a recent Times story on Livermore schools, it was inadvertently stated that the district provides instruction in American history and patriotism in kindergarten through third grade.

The statement should have read, kindergarten through TWELFTH grade. The Times regrets any confusion resulting from this error.

Tenuous future enchances charm of Venice

Ancient buildings, modern washload: Life goes on in Venice

VENICE - "Venezia is a popular place for Italians to visit these days," said Giuliana, who lives in Milan.

"Everybody wants to see it before it sinks into the ocean."

A dazzling Sunday afternoon; would have been Memorial Day Weekend back home. The blue - and - white boat that is a Venetian bus swished along the azure Grand Canal, past white marble steps covered with seaweed that lead up to Renaissance palaces crumbling from dampness and air pollution.

Venice is a city of two million people, but every tourist manag★ to find his way over the arching bridges, across the ancient squares, to the pigeon - ridden Piazza San Marco.

There is a bell tower in front of St Mark's Church On the tower are scientific instruments that chart the tides. There are also lines that record the depth of the frequent floods.

One of the lines came near Giuliana's shoulder.

When St. Mark's Place is inundated, they simply build a platform above the water level so people can get from here to there, and life goes on.

Apparently nobody has abandoned hope yet. The huge facade of St. Mark's with its intricate carvings and priceless mosaics is being cleaned and refurbished

On the fringes of the square, sidewalk cafes lure the tourist with promises of Campari and Cinzano , printed in foot-high letters on table umbrellas.

In some of the small shops, glass jewelry, figurines and dishes bear affordable price tags. The items are made on the island of Murano, a short hop by boat - bus from the city.

The famous furnaces of Murano, where white - hot glass is blown into delicate shapes by skilled craftsmen, are a big tourist attraction during the week.

But, like so many activities in Catholic Italy — never on Sunday.

Two things in operation even on Sunday are the police and the hospital. The police ride in police speedboats. Ambulances are similar vehicles, which pull into a basementlevel entrance in the ancient monastery that has become Venice's hospital.

Narrow canals and narrower walkways squeeze between the old apartment buildings. Balancing the squeezed feeling of narrowness, every apartment building has its courtyard and its balconies bright with flowers. Every block has its big open square with benches and (at least just before the June election) billboards plastered with messages about the country's 29 political factions.

Graceful and dank and elegant and crumbling, Venice has become a status place to live.

Angelica, an artist who very sensibly lives in a suburb of Venice, reports a studio apartment with shared kitchen and bath, in the city itself, goes for nearly $300 a month.

The reason?g "Everybody wants to live here before it sinks into the sea."

Pleasanton sets fee for tennis court use

The Pleasanton Recreation Department is now charging a 25 cent hourly fee for tennis court usage at Amador High School.

A tennis monitor will regulate court usage from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. Four of the nine courts may be reserved in advance, Wednesdays through Fridays only. The other five courts will be taken on a first-come, first-serve basis.

This is a three-month trial program, after which time its effectiveness will be evaluated. The Recreation Dept. hopes it will "give the tennis populace a better service in maintaining and regulating usage in a more efficient, amicable manner."

Brick balances scene

This modestly sized family swimming pool is highlighted by a spacious deck area of red brick. It provides color and good footing for those enjoying the increasing popularity of a family pool.

Pooling ideas

by Bob Anglin

Pool safety is not only a concern of people buying and owning pools, but according to Bob Anglin, sales manager for Continental Pools, it is carefully considered by reliable pool salesmen and builders. Three years ago, Continental Pools and other member firms of NSPI (National Swimming Pool Institute) from the Bay Area, met to make recommendations for proper dimensions and shapes of pools where a diving board or slide is to be installed. These perimeters were further discussed at a regional meeting in Los Angeles, and then incorporated by the NSPI in their National Pool Standards effective June 1, 1973.

Safety minded pool men have been using these standards since, resulting in few hazardous pool designs, although it is evident some of the builders either are not aware of these standards, or chose to ignore them.

A couple of things you should look for in your pool design are the width and depth of your pool. For instance, a pool with a six foot long diving or spring board should have a minimum width of twelve feet at the point of diving entry, and a depth of eight feet, and the depth fifteen feet six inches out from the deep end shall be at least five feet. The overall length of the pool, deep end to shallow would need be at least twenty-eight feet. For longer or higher boards, depths and lengths would be greater.

Slides should have at least twice the slide height in open water beyond the end of the slide, with minimum depth of water per the manufactures recommendations.

Naturally, if pool owners permit horseplay, and hazardous activities are permitted around pools, no amount of built-in safety could prevent accidents, so pool owners are urged to establish definite rules of behavior for people using their pool.

Leisure summer living

What better way to spend the hot summer months in the Livermore - Amador Valley than to make full use of a family swimming pool. It's fun and exercise for all ages. Modern techniques and material make the costs of a family pool reasonable for most income groups.

Basic family, rules should apply to pools

Whether your pool is a puddle or Olympic sized, there's more enjoyment in your watery wonderland if you set up a few basic rules for family and friends.

You don't have to apply 'gestapo' tactics to get the message across. A lot of humor can be applied to make the point that a lot of courtesy toward, and consideration of, fellow aquanauts is the order of the day. In other words, don't be 'unruly' about that pool.

If you're in a neighborhood with a heavy small-fry population and you don't intend to lock them out, then let everyone who takes advantage of a swimming invitation know there's someone in charge and that person's to be obeyed if the 'boss' thinks things are getting out of line. A simple whistle is the best piece of equipment you can have to attract attention when the action gets too lively.

Next, if there's any hope of saving your sanity, you should set up definite hours for friends and young neighbors to use the pool. Many people have found the afternoon hours from 3 to 5 to be the best time for the heavy traffic.

Always reserve evenings, weekends and holidays for your family or very special friends. If everyone who behaves themselves knows the time limits for 'open' invitations then no one can feel hurt or left out when you want exclusive use of your own pool.

Two important no-nos are running in the pool area (wet concrete can be slippery and dangerous) and permitting glass or china dishes around the pool (breakage can create serious problems). In fact, anything you can think of that can head off potential danger without completely inhibiting use of the pool should be given real consideration.

One of the most important rules, if your pool is a family affair, should be step by step chores in regard to its maintenance. Unless you have a pool service or regular yard man, that 'swimming hole' will have more meaning and give greater pleasure if there's some family responsibility in keeping it in good order. A definite schedule produces the best results (even a 5-year old can polish the chrome or wash tiles).

Make yourself a note not to created a neighborhood nuisance with your pool. A general rule-of-thumb is a 10 p.m.curfew on group swimming. If there's to be a poolside party running later, it's a nice gesture to let the folks next door know so they won't be planning something requiring total peace and quiet. They'll appreciate your courtesy.

Rules, you see, don't have to be negative. They really contribute to having more fun. Where pools are concerned, they're not all wet.

Pleasure boating lured more than 48 million Americans onto the water more than once or twice in 1974, statistics show, and these Americans spent $4.6 billion on their boating.

Good family project

Pool areas need planning

YOUR BACKYARD RESORT

While planning your new pool, no matter what size, shape or type it is wise to think about the areas surrounding this new investment.

Once you have the pool designed for you by your pool experts it can become a family project to lay out the back yard to become your private resort, recreation place.

Re-doing patio areas, decks, corners, shrubbery, etc. does not have to be an expensive situation if planned ahead using basic materials.

When planning your layout as a family affair always figure what amount of space will be required for a play area for the small children such as sand box and toys. Figure the adults entertainment space for barbecue, lounging, sunbathing.

If the area you are planning is small look in the use of screens. Simple designs in wood screens can be built by an amateur and placed into the spot where needed while patio or deck work is being done.

One of the most popular space separators being used is shrubbery. Pick the type that suits your individual needs and tastes during your designing. The wise use of planters can add much to the natural look especially where lawn areas are scarce.

Decks of redwood or douglas fir even if they are of smaller dimensions can be a beautiful contrast to the cement, pool deck.

The use of cement steps or brick for walkways or enclosing planted areas can give your "resort" design a look of professional creativity.

Of course, when the budget allows, the plan can include gazebos and dressing buildings.

If your entertainment space is limited the plans should be made so there is easy access to the house for eating and refreshments, hopefully planned to keep wet feet and dripping suits out of the living room.

The framework for your family resort is the fencing surrounding the yard. There may be a place in your plan for adding some bright or pastel color to some of the panels rather than the normal all redwood stain.

The most important thing is to plan ahead when in the process of purchasing a new pool so your yard and pool will be finished at about the same time.

Wide deck areas

This photograph illustrates what can be done with a large backyard recreation area which is dominated by an interesting sized swimming pool. The wide concrete deck area provides adequate room for the whole family to lounge in the sun. It is well drained and protects and compliments the surrounding landscape.

A matter of pride in your own town

"You have a wonderful community here. You must be terribly proud of your people."

The comment came from a visiting journalist who had no reason to butter us up. We were strolling through the center of town, after a 90-minute session involving local leaders and a delegation from Hammonton Township in New Jersey. Because the Federal Bureau of Prisons is contemplating a Youth Detention Center in Hammonton Township similar to that opened one year ago within Camp Parks, the eastern group thought it worth the trip west, to meet with people in California who have lived alongside 200 of those federal inmates for the past year.

As it turned out, we gained as much from them as they gleaned from us ... including a sense of pride that seems to have been lost in the welter of sewer and smog and growth complaints of recent months and years.

We had talked, in those 90 minutes, of this valley's 30-year relationship with a very large, in-and-out military establishment, with one of Northern California's largest county prisons, and with Job Corps Centers and Youth Detention Centers that arrived with each new federal whim. "No — we have had no serious problems. No — there has been no community uproar. Yes — we have endeavored to work with those institutions as best as we can." The responses were as candid as the questions they asked.

The site eyed by the federal people for that next Youth Detention Center is near Mays Landing, 20 miles from Atlantic City. But the immediate locale is small town, agricultural, low income. "Our people have had their misgivings about this federal prison," one member of the delegation was saying. "We have a nice little town, we don't want any trouble." He was a retired railroad porter, and — like 85 percent of that area — a Black American. His concern for "my people and my town" was no less impassioned than the fears we have heard voiced here. for a dozen different disruptions.

We left that session with the feeling that we had helped convince one small segment in New Jersey to open their hearts, and their community, to society's outcasts. We wondered, together, "Just where is the ideal location for a Youth Detention Center." And we concluded, together, that every a man is his brother's keeper.

And that is why, when it was all over, the hardened newsman from New Jersey asked to walk a few blocks through our town, breathing in the sense of tremendous change, of rural - suburban - urban upheaval, of a people compelled to adjust to the 21st Century.

"You must be terribly proud of your town, and its people. They certainly have a great deal going for them."

Yes they do. Sometimes we are inclined to forget just how much.

The week in retrospect

The schools survey

Parents and school employees want more money for education, while students want a better choice of classes. So states a survey that came out of Sacramento earlier this week.

More money and a better choice were the No. 1 responses to a state Department of Education survey on the major problems of California public schools.

The survey also found that more than half of each group questioned said the schools are doing a "fair" or "poor" job in teaching basic skills.

Surprisingly ... to us, that is ... sex education was rated the most popular proposed innovation with every group surveyed except students, who gave top rating in that category to student involvement in school evaluation.

Checking of student involvement in evaluating schools is, perhaps, not too surprising.

Given the tone of teacher attitudes in recent years, it is natural to expect that the idea of evaluating has now filtered down to the students. We say it facetiously, but is the day too far off when kindergarteners will give the "thumbs up" or "thumbs down" routine to "kindly Ms. Marple."!

Two thousand students, parents, teachers, principals, superintendents and school board members were asked questions in the survey.

Curriculum problems were second on the overall list. Next were parents' lack of interest, lack of school discipline, school and class size, lack of proper facilities, integration and drugs.

Lack of discipline, which ranked second on the students' list of problems, was first in a nationwide Gallup Poll of adults a year ago, the department notes.

Where those surveyed were asked to rate their schools, low marks were almost universal.

Schools do a "poor" or "fair" job in teaching occupational skills, said 64 per cent of students and 41 per cent of parents.

In teaching basic skills, 56 per cent of parents, 57 per cent of students, 60 per cent of teachers and 61 per cent of school board members thought schools did a "fair" or "poor" job.

I am certain that if such a survey ... with the same questions ... were applied to students, parents, teachers, administrators and school board members in the valley, the results would generally be much more positive.

Certainly we are not without problems of discipline, class size, drugs, parental interest, evaluation procedures and curriculum.

This writer is particularly concerned about the areas of discipline, drugs and parental interest.

Their is also one phase of curriculum that disturbs us ... one that we've talked about in these columns before. That is the duplication of subject areas between the Amador-Pleasanton school district and the City of Pleasanton Recreation Department.

I believe the latter agency is more than capable of conducting sports and recreation events ... that is their prime business and they do it well. They also have the expertise in the area of sports and recreation class instruction.

Yet, this is at least the second summer the aforementioned school districts have offered the likes of "do your own thing" (to quote the name of one elective from the Pleasanton Elementary summer session brochure).

"Do your own art thing" includes a "wide range of activities. Color will be stressed and you will be encouraged to express yourself and your ideas freely in many different ways ... powder color, tempera, watercolor, charcoal, collage, garbage art, etc." Their will also be craft activities in this particular elective.

Now that sounds like recreation pure and simple.

There is no need for two public agencies in the same area offering the same recreational and leisure fare.

round the town

If you've been thinking about cutting your utility bills by setting up a windmill to supply your electricity, better forget it.

That piece of advice comes from no less a source than the Council of California Growers. They issue a weekly news letter to growers and ranchers throughout the state. Their topic this time: "Don't Trust A Windmill." Their sharpest conclusion: There isn't enough wind in any part of California to stir up a ready kilowatt.

There were some other reasons I had not pursued the windmill bit, even before the Council of Growers came up with their scientific finding. I have some built-in deficiencies. The little woman in our house sums them up rather well: "When it comes to being handy around the house, you make a great journalist." She has said it more than once, and in fact more times than is necessary, in my opinion.

God in his infinite wisdom gave certain ones among us the talent for fixing this-n-that. Others are great writers, poets, athletes. I have always rated myself more of a lover, than a fighter. Whatever that has to do with it. Building a better windmill is not exactly my kind of thing. But stopping the leak in the kitchen sink is another matter.

"I really think you ought to call a plumber," she advises. I am not impressed. "At thirty bucks an hour, plus travel time, I can certainly fix a little leak without a big lecture," I reply. The first item is a visit to Kolln Hardware. "I need one of those little round things that fits up tight against the long whatchmacallit," I announce to the store clerk. This usually leads to all kinds of conversation, involving Jack, Bill and one or two helpful customers.

"What he really needs is the leather thingmajig that comes just before the round whatchmacallit," Customer A suggests. It goes on like this for a half hour or so. By the time I get the piece, return once or twice more ... "I think I need BOTH the round thing and the leather thingmajig" ... the Saturday morning is pretty well shot, and it is time for my noon confrontation with a golf ball. Which suits the woman of the house just fine.

"Just leave things as they are and I'll try to reach Gene O'Brien or John Deetz, or somebody. But do me one small favor ... LEAVE MY KITCHEN PLUMBING ALONE!" She can get terribly emotional about these things.

A guy in San Jose has installed his own solar heat system, to warm up the family pool. I have it on the authority of the public relations people for the heat system manufacturer that the installation was a complete success.

"Sid Sunshine of San Jose is like a lot of Americans who have become tired of paying rising gas bills to heat their swimming pool," the news release states. It comes on company letterhead. I suspect the whole thing is a plant ... "Sid Sunshine" indeed! They do provide Sid's address however — 2930 Ronco Drive in San Jose, if you're interested. Check out the solar heat plant for yourself. Don't take my word for it.

"I really think you're I really think you're going to be much too busy at the office and everything to consider doing that shed roof this summer," she announced just the other day. "Why don't we give Bill Mortensen a call and see if he can do it for us?" It's her sneaky little way of easing me off a job she feels is beyond me. I know what she's up to. And SHE knows that I know what she's up to. But we both play the game, and another marriage is saved.

Sometimes it does not go that smoothly. "Do you think you'll have time today to get to those weeds alongside the house," she asks, icily. "You told me it was no sense cutting them until after the end of the rainy season," I reply, cooly. "That was LAST YEAR'S rainy season," she says, "Now we're around to another spring, and another crop of weeds."

My best response is to move out of the house, with a great show of energy, rattling around garden tools, that sort of thing. I attack the weeds with a vengeance usually reserved for beating down snakes. With any luck, I will re-injure my back on the third whack, and that should end the whole silly business.

More and more Americans are turning to do-it-yourself approaches to their household needs as an answer to the nation's tightening economy. That bit of governmental information is accompanied by all kinds of facts and figures ... Mr. Smart saves $20 on that table-refinishing job, simply by sending 25 cents and a self-addressed envelope to the Federal Bureau of Table Refinishing. They send you back a pamphlet. You buy the materials. The rest is easy, the government says.

I tried painting the shed door, once. She wanted "a sort of antique green ... not a GREEN green ... but not all washed out either. Know what I mean?" No, I didn't. And after many applications of paint remover, spilling the stuff on my best golf pants (I had forgotten to change) and a few choice sentences from "Grapes of Wrath," we both agree that the antiquing of doors is a particular art, best left to the experts.

"Anything else you want done, sweetie, before I head for the fairways?"

"No," she says sweetly. "Just run along and I'll tend to a few unfinished items around here." We have a wonderful understanding about these things.

PARC defends ridge policy

Editor, The Times:

To clarify th goals and purpose of PARC (Preserve Area Ridgelands Committee) we are seeking establishment of a Ridgelands Preserve for 1100 square miles of the Diablo Range, a Preserve which will include open space, wilderness, continued agricultural use (principally grazing), parks, and trails.

There are two issues involved: (1) preservation of the land and (2) public access.

It is widely recognized that land is a precious natural resource and yet open land has been rapidly reduced by urbanization during the past half century. The San Francisco Bay Area (offers) ... the Diablo Range extending through Contra Costa, Alameda, and Santa Clara Counties. Here lie 1100 square miles of magnificent ridgelands extending from Carquinez Strait on the north to Pacheco Pass on the south.

Preservation of the land may be approached through the "Multi-Jurisdictional Planning Project" in which the governmental agencies which have jurisdiction for this area are sitting down together to look at the Diablo Range in terms of planning and land use ...

At this point, the supervisors of Contra Costa and Alameda counties, the directors of EBRPD, and the Federal Bureau of Outdoor Recreation have agreed on financial participation, $15,000 by each agency, to start this multi-jurisdictional planning project. When the goals and objectives have been specified, Santa Clara County supervisors may reconsider their financial participation. It is hoped that ABAG and the State of California Dept. of Parks and Recreation will also participate.

PARC feels that there should be ways to guarantee agricultural and open space uses with equitable assessment of private land. PARC supports continued agricultural use of land. Changing technology and economic factors influence today's rancher. Only the large land owners seem to be in a position to survive. How can agricultural use be continued?

There is need for reform of the Williamson Act ... In practice it has not worked to save agricultural land near urban areas.

Equitable assessments are difficult to achieve. Variances and conditional use permits granted by government to one piece of land give rise to speculation of changes in land use on surrounding parcels. ... If agricultural zoning were considered permanent, not temporary, speculation in land could be reduced and assessments become more equitable.

The time has come to look at land use in terms of location or urban centers, designation of agricultural areas, and establisment of open space preserves on a permanent basis. What will be left as open space for future generations?

When it comes to "public access," there are many points to consider. Public access has customarily involved some form of acquisition and necessitated public funding. Should acquisition be made at inflated, speculative land prices? Where does the money come from? What kinds of recreational use are compatible with environmental protection? What are the priorities in recreational usage? Can public transportation be provided from urban centers to recreation areas?

How can guarantees be made of personal security and fire protection? Who has liability for public access? Can there be public access to private lands as in Britain? ...

The Ridgelands Feasibility Study Bill, H.R. 2620, has been introduced by Congressman Pete Stark with 24 co-sponsors. It has a 50-50 chance of being heard in Congress this year. The Bill would authorize funding to conduct studies and make recommendations.

Nature has endowed the Diablo Range with beauty and grandeur. Can this regional resouce be preserved for posterity?

It is timely to consider all aspects of a Ridgelands Preserve. If you support the Ridgelands Multi-Jurisdictional Planning Project and H.R. 2620, let your elected officials know how you feel.

Margaret J. Tracy
Coordinator PARC

Classroom values challenged

Editor, The Times:

I've been doing a lot of reading the past few months on the subject of educational theory and philosophy, trying to find an explanation for the change in students — the widespread disrespect for authority, destructiveness to property, harassment of peers, and general negativeness. And I have come to the conclusion that schools themselves bear the main guilt ... But the past few years there has been a new trend in education which I think needs to be profoundly examined by parents and teachers.

If I had to put a label on this new trend, I'd call it "the questioning of all things." This process has always existed at college level. Certainly a student of that age is mature enought to examine his beliefs — indeed, it is necessary for his growth. What is new is that now this process of "questioning all things" has been moved down to lower grades. I believe it starts at 8th grade level. Of course, lower students have always experienced challenges to their beliefs, values and morals, but it was a random thing; a chance encounter, so to speak. What is different now is that in the schools there is a deliberate, systematic introduction of every controversial matter conceivable, with methodical effort to introduce every possible viewpoint on each matter, from the mildest to the most radical. Educators use different methods to do this, but I believe the main process if called "Value Clarifications," a process which consists of exercises designed to make the student think deeply about his priorities, and to consider every possible alternative.

The method is used in four different ways: (1) Openly an elective course devoted entirely to the subject, and openly entitled "Values Clarification." (2) Disguised - in required courses substantially but not entirely devoted to the subject, hidden under course titles such as "Career Education" and "Contemporary Problem Solving" (3) Segment — as a short segment of time in any c. (4) Integrated — with Values Clarification incorporated into the entire course. This is called "3-level teaching."

With the use of these methods, there is no way a student can avoid being subjected to the Values Clarification process. A teacher can use it or not, as he or she wishes, and can make of it anything she wishes. In my opinion, the consequences are highly undesirable, whether the teacher imposes her own biases, or whether she is totally objective. Educators insist that they are not teaching specific values; that they are merely helping the student to clarify his own values. But let's think about this. (1) The biased teacher the "crusading" type who believes American priorities are upside down. Since the students are to be encouraged to reveal their innermost feelings about various matters, it really wouldn't be fair if the teacher sat there wrapped in her privacy, would it? The teachers' manual for "Values Clarification" stresses that teachers should "expose" themselves, too. . . There is even a method by which a teacher can introduce the most radical viewpoint on any issue, without risk of being accused of advocating that viewpoint. It is called "Devil's Advocate." The following is quoted from "Values and Teaching," the textbook used in the professional courses to teach "Values Clarification."

"Too many discussions in value-related areas suffer from having only two positions in the room: a consensus and a "don't care" position. Especially in certain political and social topics, dissension is often absent. What often is needed is persuasive arguement against civil rights, for the use of profanity, against respect for elders, for revolution, against patriotism, and so on. At least such dissension is needed if the alternatives to many issues are to be fairly treated ... If someone has to advoacate the unpopular side of issues, why not let it be a friend of the devil?"

Thus, the teacher, playing "friend of the devil" can introduce the most outrageous viewpoints imaginable, with no risk to herself. (The emphasis in the paragraph quoted above is from the textbook)

(2) The objective teacher - Talking with this type of teacher reveals a marked difference between her handling of Values Clarification and that of the biased teacher. The objective teacher is extremely wary about influencing the students toward her own values she says things like "I rarely express my own opinion," and. "I don't require the students to express their opinions out loud, or to turn in their exercise papers for my perusal." But it is my opinion that the objective teachers, too, are treading on dangerous waters. They are teaching that there are no value absolutes; there are no moral absolutes. Everything is to be questioned (especially the values taught by parents) and the only absolute is your own opinion. No wonder the students are mixed up. I believe they are too young to be subjected to this "questioning of all things" before they are mature enough to have fully formed their opinions, values and morals. The result of this "do your own thing" process is that many students wind up not believing in or respecting anything — including their schools and teachers.

I repeat emphatically - this "questioning of all things" process in our schools needs to be examined deeply — by both parents and educators.

Sound and Fury

Walt Hecox

Quite a bit has been said by adults lately about fundamentalist schools. The time has come, I believe, to let the children speak.

The following paragraphs have, with the exception of some italicized comments by this old man, been written by children. The first half were made by average students (by the standards of the community which is one of the most affluent in the area) participating in a highly structured class. The teacher believes in structured classrooms.

The final quarter of last year she gave in to the constant pleas of her gifted students, (she has two gifted classes with intelligence quotients ranging from 135 to 200) and let them work by themselves on a pair of projects of their own choosing. They chose to produce a play and a newspaper. Remember when you read this, these are the super brains whom some claim should be treated as adults. Let's get to the kids and their classroom evaluations. First the average students in a structured classroom.

I think I've earned (B) it. I liked writing paragraphs but didn't like reading them out in front of the class. I like being in the circle and having the circle discussion. This is my favorite class. I also liked not always teaching English but telling your stories because they are good and interesting. I wish I had you for another couple of years. There isn't really anything I didn't like. I liked almost every thing we did.

I didn't like doing the subordinate clause and diagraming. I also don't like doing the phrases. I think I deserve an A because I worked hard and at the beginning I didn't know anything but verb and noun and punctuations and now I know a lot about other things too.

I feel I should get a B or B+. I like the astrology the best because it got me interested in something new. I feel the value clarification was a waste of time because I feel it did not help us any. I also feel the grammar the most needed because everyone needs it. I don't think I'm outstanding in English. I think it's boring. But I struggle through and do my best because I need it. If I'm not outstanding why should I get a grade that shows I'm outstanding? (This student was a standout A from the beginning.)

I really feel that sometimes I want to cut this class like today. But I have learned so much in this class in the past two years and NOW English is my favorite class. I really can't think of anything to make this class any better except to teach them to type.

I found that astrology thing was quite interesting. But keep drilling on those basic rules of English. These last 2 years I have learned more than I ever have in all my life, even though I hate those rules. Thank you, Mrs. (name deleted).

This was a well organized class and I think I could have done better.

I liked this class because we learned a lot. And if we didn't understand something you would go over it again until we learned it. It was a drag going over it but at the end it paid off.

I like the two days a week for homework but I don't think Thursday's a good day because there are so many tests on Friday. I understand more about English now. I really like the vocabulary sheets and English now P.S. you were my favorite teacher that I learned the most from.

Overlooking the last dangling preposition that is a pretty good testimonial for a highly structured class. Now let's hear from the bright lads and lassies who were allowed to work on their own. Because they wrote more than the others, I can only include excerpts.

I didn't like the fact that we were not forced to work. If we sat and talked all period it wouldn't matter. I will not work unless someone tells me to work and watches us at work. It is hard for our class to settle down. If everyone isn't working, I won't work.

I did not feel the last quarter was good at all. The reason was I know that it was that you really didn't make us work. I know you will think that is a poor excuse, and it is, really, but it is hard to do something when you don't have to hand it in right away.

I didn't think I (or we) got as much accomplished as I could have. I think the main reason is because there was no teacher to run the drama group so everyone just assumed they didn't have to learn their lines or do anything else.

I really enjoyed this class except that I didn't realize that being in charge of the drama would be such a hassle. I don't think that I really deserve over about a C because all I did was just average. This is an excellant class but I wasn't organized at the end. I'm not sure about my grade because I'm not sure about the English test, but I'm pretty sure that I blew it royal. I still think that this is one of the very best classes in this school.

I think that the idea of people picking what to do was great but what went wrong was the kids can't control other kids and we should have realized this and had an adult help ... I really thought the class was good and I really enjoyed having you for a teacher.

I think that you gave us too much responsibility the last quarter.

The end was fun. It would be better if it was structured.

The only thing that I didn't like was we needed a teacher directing it.

I think I would have accomplished more if I had been forced (more or less) to do the work.

Like I said we needed more teacher supervision on the play, because too many people got to goof off.

You can improve but being stricter.

No matter how well you (I) try to work on it, its not like having you explain it, that's for sure ... you are (no lie) one of the best teachers I've had.

There you have it, my friends. Given space I could publish much more. The children, from at least one area, have spoken. The results may surprise you, but they are recorded faithfully and with accuracy.

Make up your own mind about their validity. I know one thing for sure, to quote the kids. That teacher will probably never again let a class of genius type kids talk her into striking out on their own. By the way, the kids, seventh and eighth graders, despite their own self criticism, produced a newspaper at year's end which the printers said was equal or superior to the high school newspaper they publish regularly.

For Sunday, June 22, 1975

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Situations that you direct today will prove to be fortunate for all involved.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) People in general today still tend to treat you extremely generously. Gather your harvest while the getting's good.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Bargains or agreements today will be lasting and bountiful, especially if a friend you've known for some time is involved.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Be particularly attentive to people you meet today whose line of work is similar to yours. They may know of an opportunity for you.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Don't turn down any social invitations today, even if you have to attend several. A valuable contact is waiting to meet you.

VIRGO (Agu. 23-Sept. 22) Should conditions lend themselves to closing an important matter today, jump on it. Luck will help you profit.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Good news will be coming to you shortly through two different sources. You could even hear bits and pieces of it today.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Your aspects are very favorable at this time in regard to material blessings. Before the week is out your resources could increase.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You're likely to be the guy who winds up with everyone's chips today in your friendly little penny ante poker game.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Be patient, breaks are coming that aren't completely visible yet. Things will work out as well as you dare hope.

AQUARISU (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You are much more capable at handling major projects today than you are with smaller issues. Skip the little things till later.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You'll be lucky today in any dealings you have affecting your finances or career. Be positive. Conduct your affairs accordingly.

Your Birthday

June 22, 1975

You'll have some marvelous opportunities this year. They'll result in a rise in your status and position careerwise. A heavier take-home pay is also very likely.

Trials of a Little League ump

MIKE HILL'S SILHOUETTE TELLS STORY
Umps' big problem is background figure

BY STEVE MONA

"He couldn't see the ball if he had a telescope," they yell. "Where did they dig up this guy, he flips a coin to make each call?"

Little league umpires, "grim greapers," as they're affectionately referred to, live with the barbs every day of their lives.

In Pleasanton, teenagers are employed to officiate kids' baseball, a shift from tradition in that the chore is usually left to adults. It is the town's way of putting a few bills in a kid's pocket, and giving him an insight to human nature as it relates to one of the really tough jobs in the world.

In two years of little league umpiring, I've found that it's the parents, not usually the coaches, who are chomping to climb the backs of the boys in blue. Ninety per cent of the time, they don't even know what they're arguing about.

I've enjoyed some comical moments in those two years, and some others where I had to bite my tongue before sending managers home to an early dinner.

Contrary to belief, young umpires don't "86" coaches for kicks. In fact, I've never been involved in a contest where one was ejected. There were times, though, when it would have been easier to dismiss myself.

In one game this season, I over-ruled a safe call on a youngster attempting to steal third base. "Out," I said. "He never touched the base."

The base runner, who was also the catcher, pleaded with me the next inning. With tears streaming behind his mask, he promised that his foot had indeed nicked the bag.

Faced with an emotional trauma, I could do little more than dust off home plate.

Kids are seldom a problem in youth baseball. The sticklers are over-involved parents.

"I had to throw one lady out of the park this year when she refused to move," said two-year umpiring veteran Phil Dillenberg. "It wasn't that she was bothering me, but the catcher couldn't stand it.

"The thing that bothers me most is how coaches over-exagerate. When someone strikes out they yell 'you know he calls the low strikes, you should be ready.'"

Too much emphasis is put on winning, Dillenberg said. Especially in the younger divisions. "It burns me when a coach says 'make him throw you a strike,' in the Single A. The kids should be learning how to swing the bat. Waiting for a walk isn't helping them any."

If nessary, I will call strikes on any close pitch. It may be unprofessional, and coaches may scream. But youngsters will learn aggressiveness at the plate. They won't walk up there fearing a strikeout, hoping for a base on balls.

It is a meager defense against possible parent over-indulgence. Most umpires agree that the real answer is for everyone to leave the ball playing to the kids.

That's what it's all about.

First Bank strikes early for 11-2 win

sports
Mike Zampa, editor

Shifting into overdrive before the completion of a half inning, First State Bank of Pleasanton cruised to an easy 11-2 Alacosta Senior Babe Ruth League win over Livermore Covac yesterday at Amador Valley High School.

The Bankers, batting first despite playing on their home field, reached Covac pitcher Al Mondragon for three runs in the top of the first and took control of the ball game.

With one out, Don Palmer lined the eighth pitch thrown to him into left field for a single. Ed Bevilacqua then walked on four pitches and Rich Hall singled up the middle.

Pleasanton managed no more hits or walks in the inning but got the trio of runs nonetheless.

Ken Dalrymple chopped a grounder to shortstop, but Jay Strickland's throw to the plate was kicked away from catcher Scott Graver and Palmer scored. Greg Bellinger drove in the next run, cracking Mondragon's first offering to left for a sacrifice fly.

What followed was the low point of the day for Mondragon.

Opposing hurler Mike Garrigan swatted a towering pop in front of the plate, starting the runners, and as Hall crossed the plate, the bearded hurler had the ball pop out of his glove.

The next inning was no better for Livermore as the Bankers came up with another three runs.

Catcher Dan Straface led off and was safe on a throwing error by Covac secondbaseman Dennis Lehew. Mike Johnson walked and both runners moved up on a sacrifice bunt by Palmer.

Hall then hit one of four Texas League singles that blooped in between the Livermore lines of defense in center to score both runners. Rich scored himself, after advancing to second on the throw, via a wild pitch and a passed ball.

P-town got one more tally before Covac could break its string of goose eggs.

Dalrymple got aboard with one out on a walk and went to second when a pick-off throw got away from Livermore firstbaseman Tim Duke. He came in to score when Bellinger hit into a two-base throwing error by thirdbaseman Fred Kruger.

Covac got its only pair of runs in the last of the fourth, the final inning pitched by Garrigan, who gave up three hits and six base on balls while striking out two.

John Janzen led off with a ground single to right and went to second on a walk to Rich Reinhardt, but was picked off, Garrigan to Johnson. Scott Graver put a single through on the left side and Kelly Conrad was hit by a pitch, loading the bases.

A single by Lehew and a walk to Duke after Mondragon went down swinging accounted for Livermore's only scoring of the 2:49 game.

Singles by Mark Bevilacqua and Brett Boldrini turned into Pleasanton runs in the sixth when Johnson chased the pair with a one-bagger of his own.

First State Bank broke into double figures in the top of the seventh and final frame when Ed Bevilacqua and Hall scored on, respectively, a Dalrymple sacrifice fly and a single by substitute centerfielder Chris DePrater.

In going the distance Mondragon allowed 13 hits and seven walks while fanning five Bankers. — Dave Weber

Phils dump Garbage, 7th straight

The Pleasanton Jaycee Phillies won their seventh game without a loss in the Pleasanton National senior league last week, defeating Pleasanton Garbage, 6-2, and cinching a playoff spot.

Jim Ford's fine four-hit, 11 strikeout performance lifted the Phils. He shut out the Dodgers until the top of the seventh inning.

The Phils scored four runs in the second inning, and two more in the third. Mitch Peireia stole his 30th base of the season for the Jaycees.

Glen Hill crashed a two-run home run, his ninth of the season, and leads the league with one game to go.

Teammate Dave Negron singled twice and drove in two runs.

John Foss and Mike Mallon split the four Dodger base hits.

Doug Jones, Pat Geck and John Wise blanketed the Allied Brokers Braves on four base hits, and Grutman's hammered out an 8-2 Pleasanton National senior league victory Wednesday.

Jones was the winning pitcher for the Pirates.

He also singled twice to pace Grutman's nine-hit attack. Jeff Taylor drove in two first-inning runs for the winners with a single. Tom Litteral and John Peterson singled home runs for the Braves.

Franklin Savings rode home runs by Richard Nelson and Tom Northam to an 8-7 win over Elby's Auto Supply.

Nelson crashed a three-run homer for the winners. Tim Heinzel helped the offense with a double.

Chris Gaeckle hit a home run and double for the losers. He and Rick Gabler each drove in two runs.

Bruce's Dry Wall defeated the Padres in Triple A, 6-1. Andy Moran and Pat Kirvin each had two base hits. Moran was the winning pitcher. Bill Karvey doubled for the Padres.

Chris Wayne's bases loaded hit in the last of the sixth inning climaxed a four-run rally that earned the Phillies a 9-5 win over the Padres in Single A. It was the Phils' seventh win against no defeats in the second half of the season. They were aided by a triple play. Ted Hirst doubled and tripled for the winners. Tim Rigsree doubled twice for the Padres, and Matt Panez, once. Panez also smacked a triple.

Pleasanton American

Jim Belmer and Rick Fountain limited McKay and Somps to a pair of base hits and earned Groth Bros. a 6-2 win in the Pleasanton American major league.

Fountain earned the victory in relief. The pitchers combined for 13 strikeouts.

The Twins won with six runs in the fourth inning. Belmer singled and doubled to drive in two runs. Kevin Spring singled twice for the Indians.

Scott Dohman of the Indians had five put outs in center field.

The Four Red Carpet Realtor Twins defeated Pacific Coast Realty, 6-3. Kevin Coburn had two base hits. Jeff Andrews was the winning pitcher.

Vince Wheeland and Mike Schnorr worked in tandem to pitch a no-hitter, as Dolan Lumber topped Compton Trophy, 24-0. They struck out 12. Mike Krahnke drove in three runs. John Schwartzman and Jim Bonhan each had three RBI's.

Toy Box outlasted Frank's TV, 20-11. Jurgen Plitt and Mawreen Bastek each had three hits. Mike Knowles and Mark Hjerpe of the losers each had three hits.

Steve Mayn tripled and drove in five runs and Dan Maslana homered for three RBI Saturday as Pat Burn's Angels outslugged the Twins, 13-11, in Pleasanton American Little League 2A action.

For the losers, G. Jones doubled and tripled to produce three runs and C. Cameron doubled for a pair. D. Sisneros did an outstanding job behind the plate for the losers.

The Valley Avenue 7-11 Yankees had it a bit easier, demolishing the Harris Realty A's, 25-4.

Joey Gates tripled and got four RBI for the Yanks. Grant Bazan, Robbie Gates and Scott Slater all had a double and three RBI.

In Single A play, a homer by Robinson and outstanding defense by Holmes were not enough for the Red Sox as they dropped a 13-8 decision to the Angels. Mike Waters tripled for the winners and Steve Garvin, with two, and David Beaulieu doubled.

Pleasanton Ruth

Cooper McKenzie erupted for seven runs in the third inning to destroy Lions Club, 12-3 in Pleasanton Babe Ruth Baseball Wednesday.

Guy Houston checked Lions on eight hits to earn the pitching victory.

Mike Hoff had three Lion hits, including a double. Dennis Miller went 2-for-3, and Pat Driver singled home two runs.

R&S Drayage scored three runs in the sixth inning to snap a 1-1 tie and defeat Allied Brokers, 4-1. Mark Smith was the winning pitcher with a seven-hitter. BillebBevilacqua helped Smith with a single and triple. Vince Castillo went 3-for-4 for the A's.

Granada

A four-run fifth inning propelled Sunset Homes to a 9-8 Granada minor league triumph over Valley Bank.

David Earley, Brian Landenghaus and Mark Schimmel all slammed doubles.

Alden Lane Nursery crushed Granada Hardware, 20-6. Eric Jurkovich drove in three runs. John Lassallette doubled. Greg Rickards of Granada tripled.

Acme Trophies stopped Livermore Locker, 13-10. Stewart Serpanchy and Kevin Hall both doubled twice. Mike Lynn of the losers went 3-for-3.

Livermore Police stopped LLLRA, 23-5. Bret Chandler and Joe Marlow both had two hits for the winners. Jason Webster drove in two runs.

Top seeds gain Livermore semis

The draw sheet proved accurate in the opening rounds of the Livermore Tennis Club's annual Mixed Doubles Tournament, held yesterday at Granada High School.

As a result, the four top-seeded teams will meet in today's semi-finals, beginning at 11 a.m.

Tnp-rated Don Smith and Noel Anger drew a bye in the first round yesterday, then breezed past second round opponents Ron Korner and Mary Weaver, 6-3, 6-3 before defeating Brad Schall and Dot Svets by the same score in the semi-final.

Second-seeded Lee Williford and Emily Crowley also had a bye in round one, then downed Doug Hewey and Mary Mitchell, 6-1, 7-5 to move to the quarter-finals. There, they easily disposed of Wat Goishi and Judy Patterson, 6-1, 6-2.

Third-seeded Jerry Stunkel and Suzanne Russ defeated Dave and Charlotte Trimble, 6-3, 6-3, to get by the first round, then whipped teams of Ted Bogener and Ann Monwai (6-0, 6-1) and Mike and Sandy McCracken, 6-4, 6-3.

Mort and Marian Mendelsohn, the only husband-wife team to make the semis, did it with a first round win over Marlin Pound and Winnie Ferguson, 6-3, 6-3; a second round defeat of Alan and Marilyn Gotesman, 6-2, 6-3; and a hard-earned victory over Doug Larson and Dot Reynoldson, 6-2, 6-7, 7-5.

Jack mellows for State Am

Jack Stevenson, so terrified three weeks ago he could hardly swing a golf club, is in Carmel brimming with confidence as he awaits the start Monday of the California State Amateur Golf Championship.

The Amador Valley High School senior is part of a field of 170 that includes one of the state's best junior college golfers, Vic Wolfe of Livermore.

The tournament gets underway with rounds Monday and Tuesday at Cypress Point and Pebble Beach courses. The top 64 scores will be eligible for a final qualifying round Wednesday at Pebble, then the final 32 golfers begin match play Thursday.

Non-qualifiers begin consolation match play Wednesday.

Stevenson qualfied for the State Am three weeks ago at San Francisco's Olympic Club, in a hair-raising playoff that almost left him breathless.

"I was shaking so hard I couldn't hold the club," he said. "But I'm not nervous now. I'm going into this tournament full of confidence."

Jack, the EBAL golf champion this past season, is an unlikely choice to reach the match play flight Thursday. It's just not done on a youngster's first try at the State Amateur.

But he has already surprised critics by gaining a berth in the championship.

"Everybody was telling me I wouldn't make it because of the pressure," Stevenson said. "But I wasn't nervous at all at Olympic Club until that playoff."

Stevenson seemed headed for a certain qualifying spot at Olympic Club until he faltered on the final five holes. He covered the home stretch in six-over par, and wound up tied with 17 other golfers playing for 10 spots in the State Am.

That's when panic set in. Jack pushed a drive 150-yards right of the fairway on the first hole of sudden death. Somehow, he managed to straggle in with a par, then survived a bogey on the second hole, and won his spot with a par on the third.

"It cost $30 to enter the qualifying," Stevenson pointed out. "I kept thinking, if I don't make it, that's $30 of my dad's money down the drain for one stupid round of golf."

Stevenson tees off at 7 a.m. tomorrow at Cypress Point, a course he's never played before. Cypress is closed for another tournament today, so Jack is reaquainting himself with Pebble Beach.

"I play better on a course I've never played before anyway," Stevenson said. "That way I can't think ahead. Let's say I'm on the fourth hole. Well I won't be thinking that I can do this or that on the 16th. As far as I'm concerned, there isn't even a back nine there."

It will take back-to-back 76's to survive the first cut, Stevenson predicted. The pressure of a major tournament will force the scores up, he said.

Jack, strong off the tees, is spending the weekend on his short game to prevent too much escalation.

Nerves, he said, won't be a factor, though it's his first major amateur event.

"If I don't make it, it will be my fault," Stevenson said. "It will be because I didn't chip well, or putt well, but not because this is my first time."

Nevertheless, if there's a playoff Wednesday, and Stevenson is one of those facing sudden death, stand clear and hope.

Sports in brief

Stongs vs. locals today

The Dunbar Stongs of British Columbia will face the District Three Under-16 All-Stars this afternoon at 1 on the Aquatic Center field in Pleasanton.

The Stongs currently lead the 15-year third division in Vancouver. They are led by all-star performer Steve Nesin.

Playing for the District Three Stars will be local players, Brad Boldrini, Pat Cohan, Steve Englebrecht, Paul Carridan, Steve Robinson. Kevin Burke, Jim Klin, Roger Hurlowand Jim Boulware.

The Stongs will face Dublin United Tuesday night.

All-comers

Rick Richardson will be directing the summer track and field program for youngsters Monday at Granada High School.

Daily sessions will be held Monday through Friday beginning at 9 a.m., sponsored by the Livermore Area Recreation and Park District.

The program is organized for youngsters ages 9 and up.

Michelle off

California High's Michelle Fabian departs for White Plains, N.Y. tomorrow to join her mile relay teammates from the Orinda Track Club at the AAU Junior Women's Track and Field Championships.

Coach Don Bailes' quartet will attempt to qualify at White Plains High School Tuesday for the junior finals on Wednesday.

Then Friday, the team will run in trials for the AAU Senior Women's Championships. Those finals will be held Saturday. That event is also in White Plains.

Competing with Michelle will be Pleasant Hill High School sensation Kathy Costello, California's high school champion in the mile and 880. Kathy was voted the outstanding female athlete in the Bay Area two weeks ago.

Also on the mile relay team are Colleen Moran of Concord, and Orinda's Mary Mauton.

David churns

David Daniels of the NorCal Aquatics Swim Club in Dublin won two races and placed in six others last weekend at the King Kamehameha Day Invitational Swim Meet in Honolulu.

He was the only local competitor in the meet which featured 3,800 entries.

Daniels, 12, won the 200 meter freestyle with a time of 2:18.63, and the 50 back stroke in 34.82.

He finished second in the 100 meter free, 1:06.64, and the 200 individual medley, 2:41.07.

American swimmers from Minnesota, Oregon and California competed in theevent, along with swimmers from Hawaii and Guam.

Swiss Enchiladas With Chicken

1 large stewing chicken
1 dozen tortillas
oil
4 chicken bouillon cubes
2 cup sweet cream, warmed
pound Monterey Jack cheese

Stew chicken until done, remove meat from bones, discard skin. Mix with:

2 tablespoons oil
1 medium onion, chopped
1 clove garlic, crushed
2 chopped green chiles
1 cups tomato puree
2 cup cooked chicken, chopped
salt to taste

Fry tortillas in about 1 inch of oil, do not let them get crisp, dissolve bouillon in hot cream and dip each tortillas in mixture. Cover generously with chicken filling, roll up, place seam side down in baking pan, pour remaining cream over all. Top with cheese bake in 350° F for 30 minutes. For the filling fry onion until soft, add all ingredients and simmer about 10 minutes. Garnish with sliced tomatoes or avocado. Serves 6
